'POLICE GAZETTE'S' PUBLISHER DEAD

Richard K. Fox, Sporting Enthusiast, First to Give Champions Belts.

Word was received here last night that Richard K. Fox, sportsman, publisher and owner of the Police Gazette, died yesterday in his home at Red Bank, N. J., of hardening of the arteries.

His wife, Mrs. Emma Louise Fox, who cared for him during his illness, lasting nearly a year, was at his side.

Fox's career was a remarkable story of the achievements by an immigrant.
He was born in Belfast, Ireland, in 1846.
He worked at an early age as a messenger and owner of the Police Gazette.
He had a private tutor teach him the three "R's," paying the equivalent of 50 cents a week for his lessons. He later became a solicitor for the paper and, saving his money, came to America in the early 70s in the steerage.

Landing in New York city with 75 cents in his pockets, Mr. Fox obtained employment as an advertising solicitor on the Wall Street Journal. After learning this end of newspaper work he procured a similar position with the owners of the Police Gazette. After six months, the periodical being in poor financial condition, Fox bought it.

He gained control of the paper in 1875 and launched a campaign to make the Police Gazette a byword in the sporting fraternity. It is estimated that he gave away more than $1,000,000 in prizes for athletic contests.

Fox was the first man in America to give championship belts to the winners of pugilistic contests. Fox became actively in pugilistic affairs in 1880. The clubhouse injected considerable interest into the affairs of the ring by arranging the match between John L. Sullivan and Paddy Ryan, the "Trojan Giant," in which the former won the championship.

Fox felt so certain that Ryan would be the winner that he gave $1,000 to the champion to wear on himself. Sullivan won in nine rounds.

Fox was determined to find some man to beat Sullivan and selected Jake Kilrain. Sullivan won after seventy-five rounds. To show his feeling against Fox, Sullivan refused the championship belt.

The funeral will be Monday in Campelli's Funeral Church, Broadway and sixty-sixth street. In addition to the family services, it was said last night another service may be held for the sporting fraternity.

LANGELOTH'S WIDOW
LEAVES HUSBAND

Mr. and Mrs. Anson L. Clark Separate After Two Years.

Mrs. Valeria Langeloth Clark, wealthy widow of Jacob Langeloth, formerly head of the American Metals Corporation, has separated from Anson L. Clark, her young husband, she admitted at the Piazza Hotel last night.

"We separated last Wednesday," she said. "I have nothing to say as to any possible legal proceedings. My attorney will answer such questions."

Job E. Hedges, 165 Broadway, attorney for Mrs. Clark, declined to state whether divorce proceedings will be instituted against Mr. Clark, who is head of a coffee importing firm at 98 Front street that bears his name.

Mrs. Langeloth met Mr. Clark about two years ago. A year later they were married.

Jacob Langeloth, first husband of Mrs.
Clark, died August, 1914, leaving an estate of $2,257,075, from which his widow received $250,000 cash and an annuity of $100,000. She also received the $285,000 home at 826 Fifth avenue.
This she sold. The residue of the Langeloth estate was left for the foundation of the Valeria Home, named in honor of his wife, at Riverside, Conn., where Mrs.
Langeloth Clark has her country home.

SOCIETY AT SEANCE CHATS WITH GHOSTS

but bold, let us describe Mr. Ticknor before meeting the ghosts.

Mr. Ticknor is fifty or thereabout—young, gray, pink and white. There is nothing "phycic" about his outward appearance or his wrappings, the ordinary garments of a reasonably civilized community. Mr. Ticknor, to the life, is one of those town boosters that make rotary clubs spin like a pinwheel and who are great at thinking up the notions and legends you always see as you go in and out of rising young municipalities.
You would almost as soon suspect John J. McDermott of mediumistic powers.

The drumfire of conversation produced by Mr. Ticknor has come volleying in a New England accent so unmistakable that you would spot the man's origin if you overheard him in a London fog or
"R's," paying the equivalent of 50 cents
a week for his lessons. He later be-

WETS SEEK A PILOT FOR 1924 CAMPAIGN

Wilson, Cox, Smith, Palmer, Edwards and Reed Are Possibilities.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD
New York Herald Bureau, Washington, D. C., Nov. 14.

Wet leaders are seeking a Moose, who will pilot them to the promised land of light wages and beer in 1924. Both parties are being canvassed impartially, but the Democrats show the most talent.

It is being emphasized that Woodrow Wilson vetoed the Volstead act and that a Republican Congress passed it over the veto.

Wet leaders want a wet plank and a wet candidate in one of the old parties.
If they don't get both, they say, they will form a third party. They insist that liquor was the only real issue in the last campaign and will be the only one in 1924. The tariff as an issue is becoming dangerous and dangerous, and the League of Nations is dead, they say.

Looking to the old parties and accepted leadership the wets are casting longing eyes upon Gov.-elect Smith of New York. The possibility of a sweeping Democratic victory by attaching the solid South to Northern States where wets would vote wet irrespective of party looks appealing to leaders.

Some Southern Senators insist the South would vote Democratic, in spite of any wet platform, but others are dubious. They point to the Ku Klux Klan as a rising factor and fear its activities would endanger the party.

Gov. Edwards of New Jersey was a factor in the Democratic landslide campaign of 1920. An indifferent primary campaign was carried on for him in the South and in some of the wet States. He advanced himself as a candidate, but he was not well known as a national figure. Since then wet strength has grown and Gov. Edwards has become better known.

Gov. Cox of Ohio is still in the ring.
He took a liberal position in 1920, but submerged everything on the League of Nations issue.

A. Mitchell Palmer of Pennsylvania, a liberal wet, is being looked upon with favor, and there is no doubt among wet leaders of his being receptive. Senator Reed (Mo.) is a dark horse.

EXPECT NEWBERRY TO QUIT.

Michigan Politicians Are Guessing About the Senator.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD
DETROIT, Nov. 14.—There is an opinion here that Senator Newberry will resign before March 4, when Senator-elect Ferris will take his seat, although nothing definite so far has appeared to confirm the belief.

Senator Newberry will make no statement until after the conference with his political friends sometime within two weeks.

Gov. Grosbeck says he has received no hint from Senator Newberry in regard to resignation.

GIRL JURORS ACQUIT MAN.

AKRON, Ohio, Nov. 14.—Sixteen girls of a local high school civics class sat as a jury today in police court and acquitted Rudolph Kallan, charged with violation of the State prohibition act. The girls were spectators in court when the Kallan case was called. Judge A. F.
O'Neill asked if they would like to act as jurors. All were eager to serve.

"There wasn't enough evidence to convict the man," the girls explained after they had returned the verdict.

DRY GRAFT INQUIRY EXTENDS TO ALBANY

Director Simons to Trace Alleged Patronage by State Officials.

Investigation into alleged graft among members of the prohibition enforcement department will be extended to Albany.
Dir. J. Simons, director of State agents, will go to the State capital Friday to follow up charges made by the Rev.
Wallace H. Marsh, superintendent for the Anti-Saloon League for that district, that "persons in ultra respectable circles in Albany are receiving liquor whenever they want it and receiving it unmolested."

Saloon in Albany, the Rev. Mr.
Marsh charged, are "selling hard liquor very openly with protection from high sources and are being patronized by State officials and legislators."

Dry agents in the Albany district recently were called to New York for a conference with E. C. Yellowley, acting director for the State. Department of Justice agents are conducting an investigation into the operations of every State dry agent. Indictments will be acted against those found to have acted in collusion with saloons or bootleggers.

Charged Election Fraud.

Justice McAvoy in Supreme Court yesterday refused to permit Henry I.
Frank to inspect the ballots cast November 7 in the Twentieth Congressional district, where Frank, the Democratic candidate for Representative, was defeated by Fiorello H. La Guardia, Republican, and former President of the Board of Aldermen.

An inspection was sought on complaint of fraud and intimidation. Russell A. Tarbox, Assistant Corporation Counsel, argued in behalf of the Board of Elections. He said that the municipal board will report to the State Board of Canvassers after November 25, and the latter in turn will certify the election of the successful candidate December 15.
